We major in many fields

Today, it takes more than a single venture to build a major corporation such as GT&E . . . it takes a family of subsidiaries operating in many diverse fields.

Our roots are in the telephone business, with operating companies providing telephone service to areas in 32 states.

We are also engaged in vital research and development work in military electronics and space communications.

In manufacturing, our subsidiaries produce a wide variety of products for business, industry and the consumer . . . from sophisticated electronic components to photoflash bulbs.

And supporting our manufacturing arms are a series of research centers working on new and better products and services to meet tomorrow's needs.

Today, GT&E is one of America's foremost companies in terms of dollar sales, revenues, and diversity of products.

As a young, aggressive company with no limit to its growth, GT&E is an enterprise you may wish to think of in terms of your own future.

Vince is Superman

Vince Rayow, disguised as the mild-mannered proprietor of the Comstock Family Restaurant (a right turn off El Camino on Oak Grove just before the Park Theater), when he is not changing in telephone booths, is supervising a fine menu of best food per dollar value in dignified informal atmosphere. Only Superman could do this and get away with it. Come on in and watch Mr. Vince leap tall buildings at a single bound.

NOW THAT the Old Boy is preparing to move into his swanky new digs in the fast-rising publications building, it's time to rummage around that old run-down shack of his and throw away all the crap that's managed to accumulate since the Great War. Golden memories, as the Quad would say, one last long stroll down memory lane, a veritable blood bath of nostalgia, relics of a by-gone age, misty-eyed glimpses of a lost era, etc.

And what have we here? Why, it's two thousand copies of the famous green issue, which didn't sell up to expectations. And they're just as funny now as they were then, which goes to show that a truly universal sense of humor never goes out of style. "The Chappie isn't as funny as it was when I was a freshman," it says on the cover. Isn't that cute? A little touch of paranoia peeking into our everyday lives. Believe me, those of us on the staff who tried to walk around campus after the green issue hit the stands will never forget the true meaning of the word "brotherhood."

A few copies of "Stanford, 1984" cap the mountain of green with a fast-fading magenta. (More Quad-style lingo.) Here's a picture story inside featuring the fast-fading Lou Padulo as a 1984 Stanford student, beleaguered by the increasing pressures of a conformist society. What in the hell ever happened to Lou? Why, he's married now (a real cute girl) and has left Stanford for Georgia Tech. And what ever happened to the pressures of a conformist society? More faithful than Lou to Stanford, they are still with us, as Mr. Frank Morse would testify if they would only let him on campus. Morse is the kind of person the Administration just won't put up with any more when there are hundreds and even thousands of people dying to get in who are "serious about their education." Everyone at Stanford is expected to be serious about his education these days, and about everything else, too. Even the Chappie is expected to be a serious humor magazine, and has been amazingly successful at it.

The blue overlay cover of the "Beer Belongs" issue shows a seemingly drunk and derelict Mark Draper lying in a stupor before the office of the Dean of Students. Of course, once you recover from your initial shock, you realize that it's all a joke, albeit in dubious taste, and the whole tableau was staged with the permission of the Dean's office, just to show that they really are heckofa good sports. Well, we really didn't have their permission exactly, but they hadn't expressly forbidden it (they did soon after), and as long as the blame couldn't be affixed directly on any one individual, well, why bother to kick anyone out of school when a stern warning would do just as well. What ever happened to Mark? He's a drunken derelict bum now, which just goes to show that a lot of people got their big start in life with the Chappie. Yeah, there's a lot more to an education than just book-learnin'. That's why the administration "puts up" with broadening activities like Chappie, and ROTC, and Physics Club, even though they know the students' time would be better spent, from an efficiency point of view, recopying his notes.

Here's a rare one. An old parody of the Stanford "Daily," which tries to make it out as a cheap, sensational, yellow rag, which cares more about journalistic slickness than reporting the news. Man, those old Chappies sure had imagination. All the big "news stories" are obvious trivia, magnified grotesquely in a desperate attempt to make them seem important. And all the really important stuff is in minute type on the inside third page. Can you beat that!

And what have we here underneath all this dirt and grime? More dirt and grime, of course, but beneath that a few of the very first Chappies dating from 1899. Here's the first one, itself, displaying the immortal "There was a roomer afloat in Encina last night" on its cover. Now that all the people who bought that first issue have graduated, we will probably run the Encina cartoon again, together with some jokes from inside. That will save us having to think up any new jokes.

That's funny. I didn't know we had a Methodist hymn book in the office. Well, why not, I feel in the mood for a good rousing hymn. Aha! Layboy! Filth, smut, carnal wish fulfillment, all the things that every decent man despises himself for craving. What ever became of all these people responsible for Layboy? Nothing, the administration saw to that. Society must protect itself from the vultures who would feed in the dark corners of men's souls (Sequoia lingo this time.)

We, all the members of the Stanford family, stand poised on the very edge of greatness. It won't do to look backwards at the old, ungreat Stanford, which didn't even have a shopping center, or students who were serious about their education. Goodbye, memory lane. We have important new problems to face, questions to discuss. Are students really scum? What is the limit of human endurance? Can a dean legally kill a student? These are really important issues of the future. Who cares if Leland Stanford Jr. was a virgin?

The Will To Cathedral

DON HENDRIE

Murdock Stone, boy mayor of Spitfield, and the only person certain of his fate in that town, took it upon his shoulders to construct a modern cathedral for Spitfield. Jackson Strange objected because it was he, the senior member of the school board, who opposed Murdock in every single project which the boy mayor conceived.

Stone: This here cathedral will be a pillar of our town, a very edifice to us.

Strange: Don't listen to him, friends gathered here on our dusty streets; he is propagating faith which is false and his edifice will only cost you scrim from your own jeans.

Stone: Cast not dust from your jeans in favor of scrim-saving, my fellow-folk gathered under these bowers, for Jackson Strange says words, not from his heart, but from his pinched and dusty jeans. He is a rat and an abomination.

Strange: I see my rage crawling toothless amongst you who are deluded by this Murdock-punk. Stand aside as I leave in righteous indignation.

Spitfield town, not any watering place nor oasis of modern America, roared its unified approval of their boy mayor Stone who basked in the refraction of his glory without a grin.

Stone: Now that from our ranks has been removed this rat of a Strange, we are free to talk of that will to cathedral which I, Stone, have created in you. Build and Buy is our cry. Nay, cease your cheering, muttering, yells, whistles, and cat-calls; cease and give, give me the fruits of your jeans.

Roaring, the folk of Spitfield yielded forth their fruits, and clouds of dust rose under their sun. Surrounding Stone grew a great pile of coins and dust — the restless droppings of a people long suffering in the tightness of their jeans.

Stone: People of Spitfield, dusty bower-dwellers that you are, hear me. Go away now that you have yielded your fruits, for I've now got what's mine. Good-bye suckers and such that you are. Fare you well in your fruitlessness.

The dusty, empty prigs herded away from Stone and his luminous pile, and headed for Kate's Kozy Korner & Kat House where they stood about disgruntled because of their voided jeans. Meanwhile Stone, alone with his fortune, began to chuckle in his own self-esteem.

Stone: Oh well. Jesus. By damn. Where's my official mayor's croaker sack, that seal of office and sticky symbol combined in one bag—Where . . . Oh well, here comes Lick Hoager, the bearer of the bag, who seems not to have it.

Lick, tall and inimitable, came up to Stone, alone, sounding the shifting of his own dust by way of his nostrils which were flaring after the fashion of his favorite film person, Hamnet Hobarth.

Lick: Wher't ya go after that last bandy 'a four pint, Mr. Mayor, you boy, you?

Stone: Hush up now, Lick, about that which you're hinting at. Where now, Lick, did you stash my official bag? I need it immediately for this swag which you see about me, fruits of the dusty-jeaned populace and symbol of my victory over the rat, Jackson Strange.

Lick: Huh?

Stone: Right you are, Lick. However, I need my precious croaker sack which you seem to have put away from your mind temporarily.

Lick: Wha? Where'd you get all that bread around and about your feet a'lying? Huh? Where, Murdock, where?

Stone: My patience nears its boyishly restrained end, Lick Hoager. What has happened to my bag?

Lick: Forget it, punk, I burnt it last week. How's that grab you?

Murdock Stone, bagless, sank to his knees amongst the swag, bemoaning the loss of his power, and quite possibly the whole cathedral concept, for how could he cart away his loot without his bag? Despair rose about him like dust and gripped him in the manner of tight jeans, and a grayness nipped at his lips, parching his tender throat.

Stone: Each year one season follows another.

Each year Emma, The Hooker goes to Kansas City for a frenzied abortion.

Each year the rat Strange births a toothless rage.

Each year the dust rises and and the jeans shrink.

Each year I lose my bag.

Oh Shit, what a tragedy.

With this Stone bowed his head to the dust and loot, making a tinkling, gay, brassy noise as he beat his head upon the pavement. Lick Hoager snorted and weaseled his way back into the boy mayor's confidence by offering him a plug of his favorite chaw.

Stone: Thanks, Lick, you're a rational person.

Lick: Forget it, punk.

73 EMBARCADERO TOWN & COUNTRY

He was showing the beautiful but not too very intelligent girl around his apartment. She paused before a carved wooden object resting on the mantel and asked, "What in the world is that thing?"

"Oh," he replied, "that is an African phallic symbol, which was used in fertility rites."

"Well," she brightly remarked, "I'd hate to tell you what it looks like."

The farm had been mortgaged to give daughter a college education. Father drove the Model-T Ford to the station to pick her up after graduation exercises were over. She crawled in bed beside honest Pa in his clean, worn overalls. She snuggled beside him in a confidential mood.

"Pa, I have a confession to make," she whispered. "Pa, I ain't a good girl any more."

The old man wrung his hands and his head dropped low as he said with remorse, "After all the sacrifices that your Ma and I made to give you a good education—and you still say 'ain't!'"

What's the definition of a virgin?
An ugly third grader!

"For goodness sake, use both hands!"
"Can't. Gotta drive with one."

A morality play is one in which the characters are goblins, ghosts, virgins, and other supernatural characters.

Adam and Eve were naming the animals.

Adam: "I think we should name this one a turtle."

Eve: "Why turtle?"

Adam: "Heaven knows, it's slow enough to be one."

"You can't beat the system," moaned the student, after he'd received his final semester grades. "I decided to take basket weaving for a gut course, but two Navahos enrolled, raised the curve, and I flunked."

They got him for breaking into a woman's restroom—or something about a maiden head.

Did you hear about the woman who gave birth to a 20-lb pea?

She was raped by the jolly green giant.

Student: "It's outrageous. I saw two rats fighting in my room last night."

Housemother: "So, what did you expect for thirty dollars a month? Bull-fights?"

Percival surprised his group by announcing one night in his rather high nasal lisp, that he intended to get married the following Tuesday. Some of his more skeptical friends made bets that he wouldn't go through with it, but to their surprise, he even went on a honeymoon.

When he returned, one of the heavy losers accosted him and asked in a sarcastic tone, "Well, Percy, is your wife pregnant?"

"Oh, I do hope so," lisped Percival. "I really shouldn't want to go through that again."

NEXT YEAR

NEW OFFICE

NEW STAFF

NEW IDEAS

Yes, kids, all this and much more will be available to you at the Chaparral. Just like poor Bruce, of furniture fame, the Chappie is moving to new headquarters, across the street. This move will mean that we can finally expand our "in group" to include all you humorists, anarchists, intellectuals, cynics, artists, photographers and movie starlets who we know are now running loose on campus searching for a group with which to identify. In what little time remains of this quarter you are all invited to come to the shack (aw, you really do know where it is, don't you, if not ask the Dean, any Dean) and hear the New Old Boy hold forth on his fantastic scheme for next year. If you can't handle that, at least make your interest known at the first opportunity next Fall. If you do we just might invite you to the very big blowout scheduled to open our new offices.

In Love?

LET GLEIM'S PROVIDE YOUR PRECIOUS ENGAGEMENT DIAMOND

You'll always remember the romance, the thrill of selecting your engagement ring together — but it's time for good sense, too. And doesn't it make good sense to rely on the knowledge and trustworthiness of your jeweler when buying a diamond? At Gleim's, you have the assurance of buying from a Member American Gem Society, a distinction awarded annually only to jewelers who qualify on the basis of gemological knowledge and business integrity. It costs no more to buy here, and it will be such a proud beginning to your long and happy marriage.
