REFLECTIONS

NOW THAT the Old Boy has injected some color into his life, he's tickled pink. Just look at him up there, staring lovingly in the mirror. The withered one hasn't felt this good since he found that pack of cigarettes on the ground.

"Hooray for the peachy peachiness of my face!" he cries in a rare moment of girly abandon. "Hooray for my bright red tunic, for the blue highlights on my hammer, for this brown owl! Yippity yippee yay!"

This is the fulfillment of the Old Boy's lifelong dream: color. Beautiful, sensuous, four-tone color, splashed throughout the pages of his favorite magazine. You're in luck, gentle reader: the Old Boy's beloved Chaparral is in full color for the first time.

Turn the pages and you'll find a new world before you. Blue skies. Tan shoes. Green turtles and white people. "Crash Comics" is a Chappie tradition as old as television, but full color? This is uncharted territory, folks. Think of this as chocolate television.

Enough words—pictures are the order of the day. Look and be happy; these pages will turn your brown eyes orange

THE FALL OF MR. PUN

WOULD THIS SUCK? OR RULE?

An elephant is your big brother.

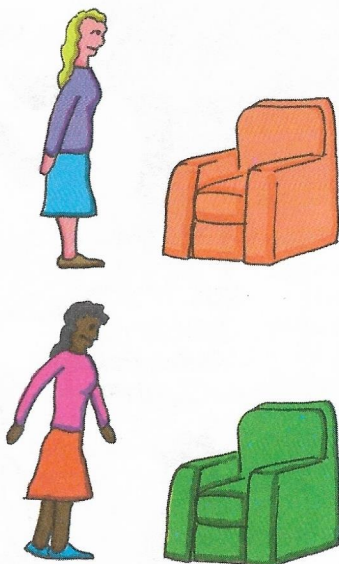

You're a country superstar.

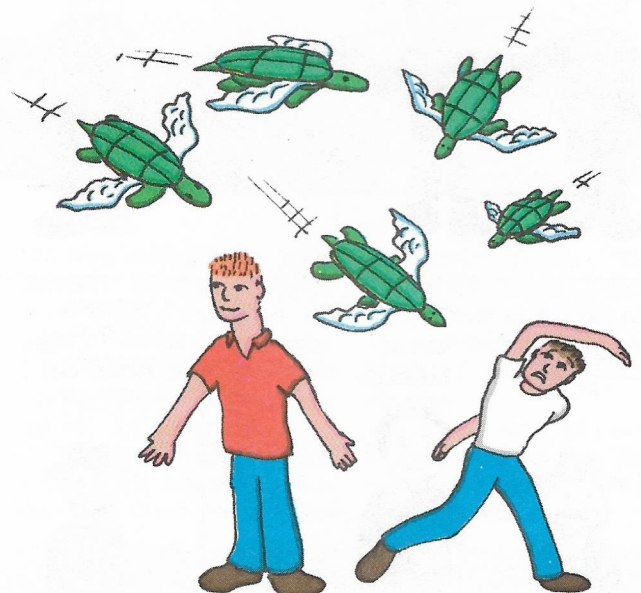

Everyone is always naked.

Your husband doesn't want you to have a job.

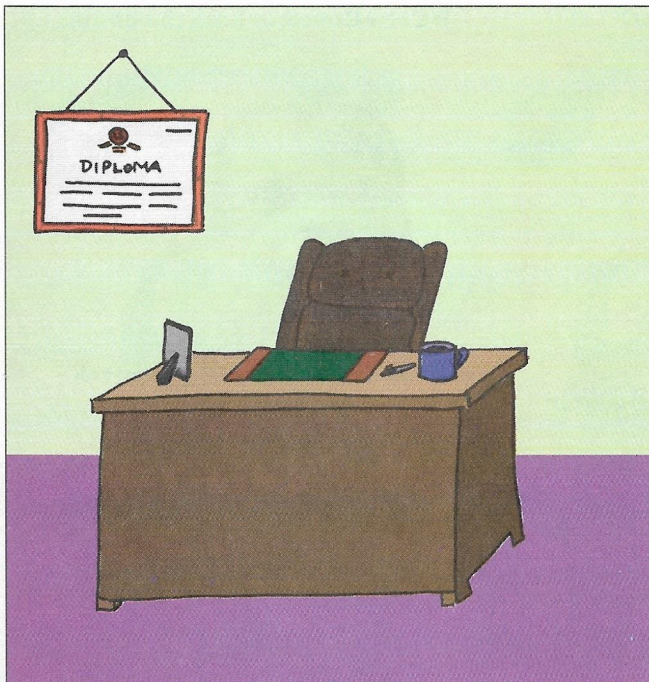

Things change color every day.

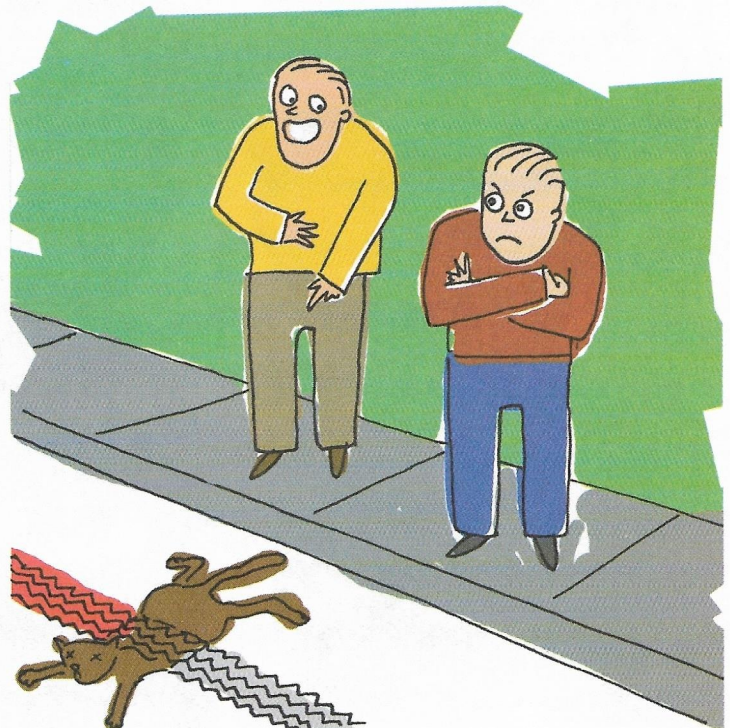

Turtles can fly.

Even with the superhero endorsement, Puppy Brand X couldn't shake the label of the puppy that nobody wanted.

Mr. Roberts would see how he liked a kitty under his desk.

"Looks like curiosity killed your cat."

A DISCUSSION ON BIGOTRY AND THE NATURE OF PREJUDICE

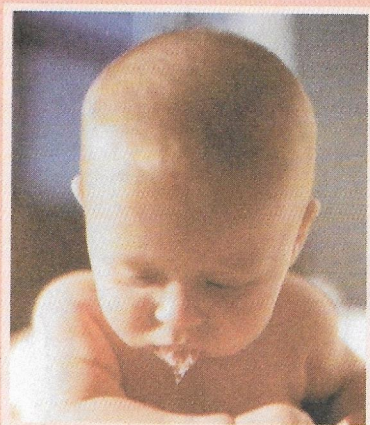

First, I think we should lay a foundation of open communication.

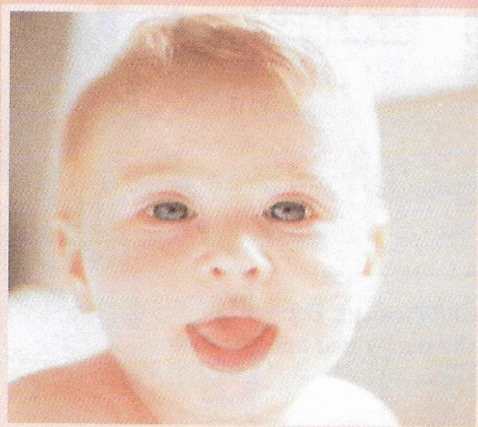

Except for the Jews. They shouldn't be allowed to talk.

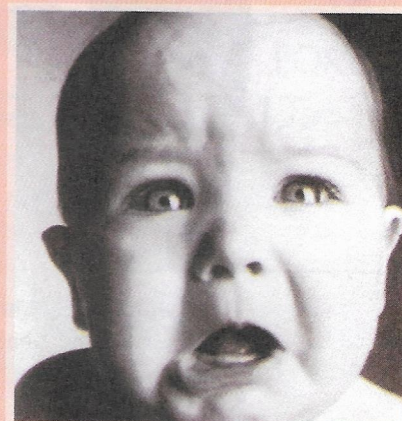

Charles! If you came here to make trouble, why don't you just leave?

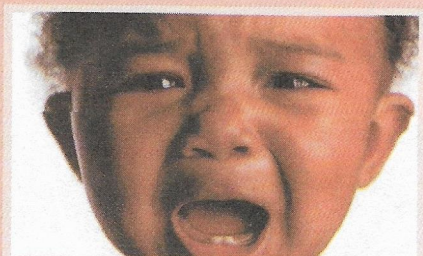

No, Bob. Let him speak. We're here to cultivate an open forum.

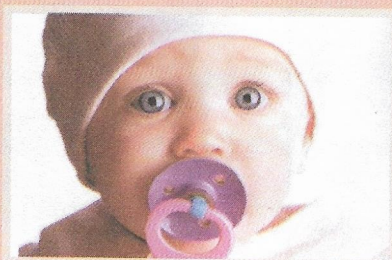

Irish people make good movies. Is it bad to say that?

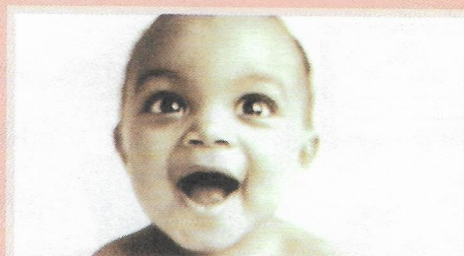

Come on, we're just babies! We're allowed to hate the South.

I don't even understand hate. I can barely eat solid food.

What are we talking about? Did we come here to argue over semantics?

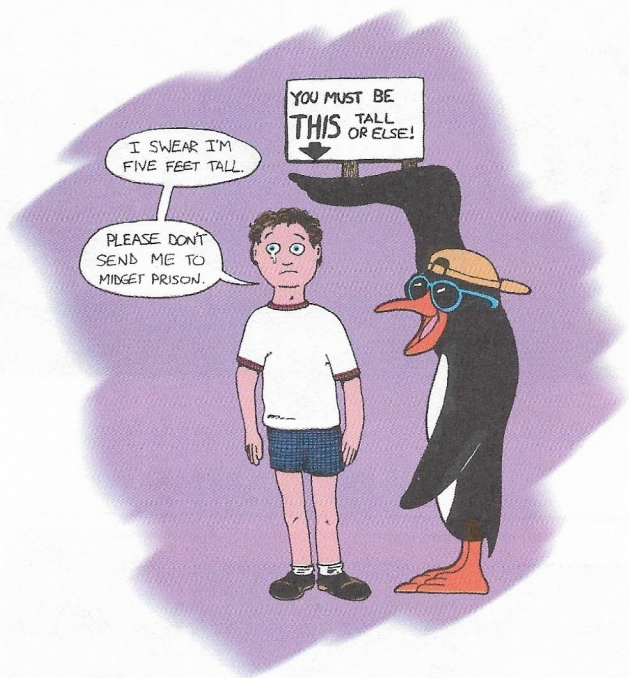

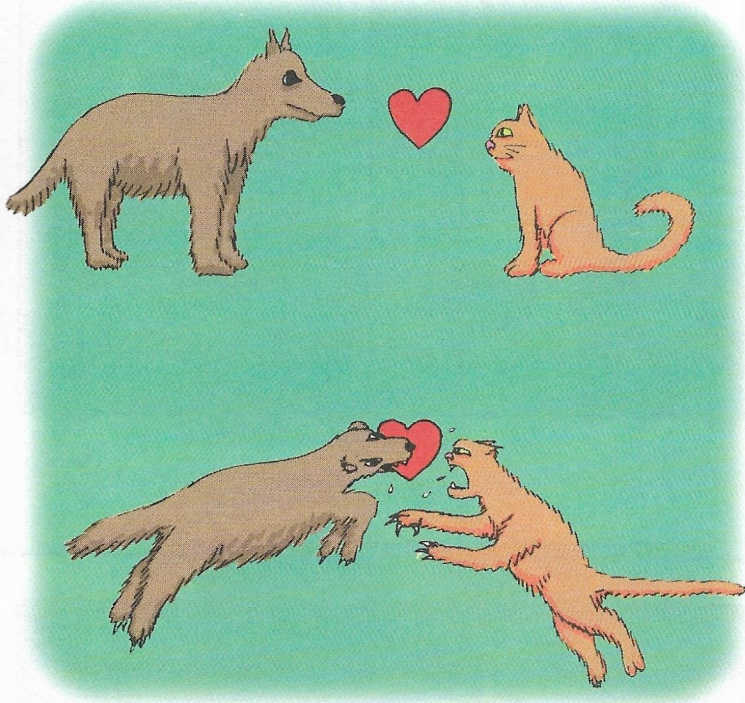

What time is it? When do we break for lunch?

Stephen's right. We can't just go around pretending that words don't hurt.

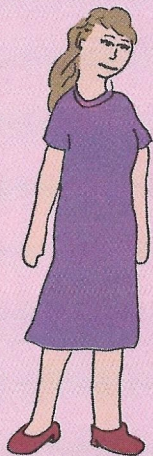

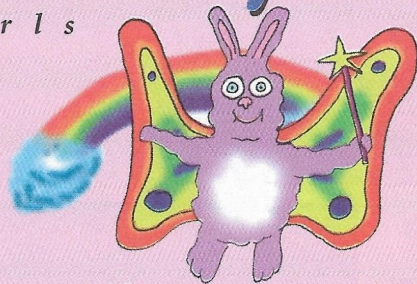

But I hate immigrants.

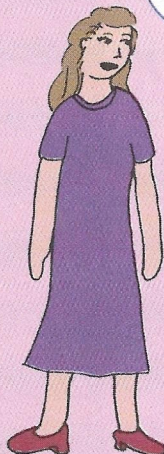

The Magical Rainbow Bunny

a cartoon for girls

Mommy, what makes rainbows?

The Rainbow Bunny, dear.

Starting now, I'll put a dollar in this box every day.

I'm saving up to buy my son a bike for his birthday.

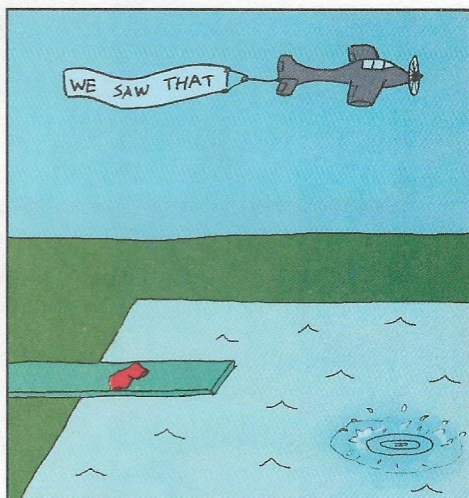

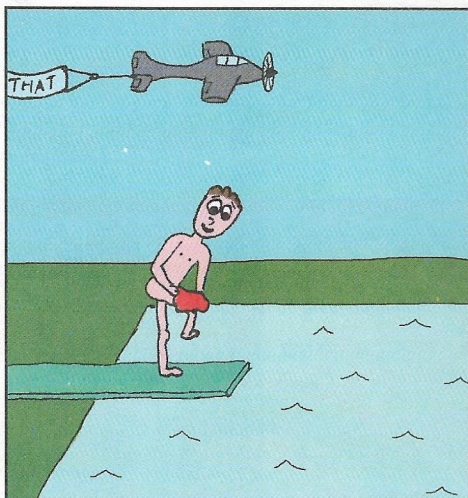

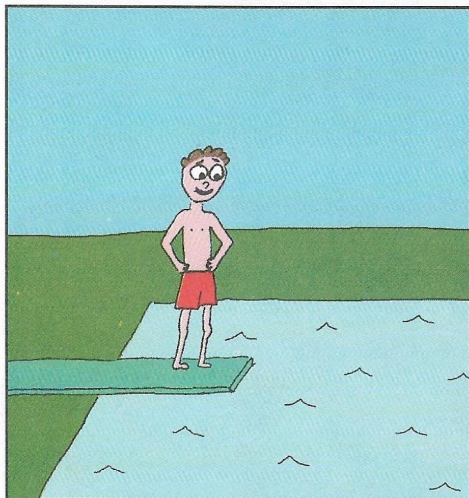

Which is tomorrow.

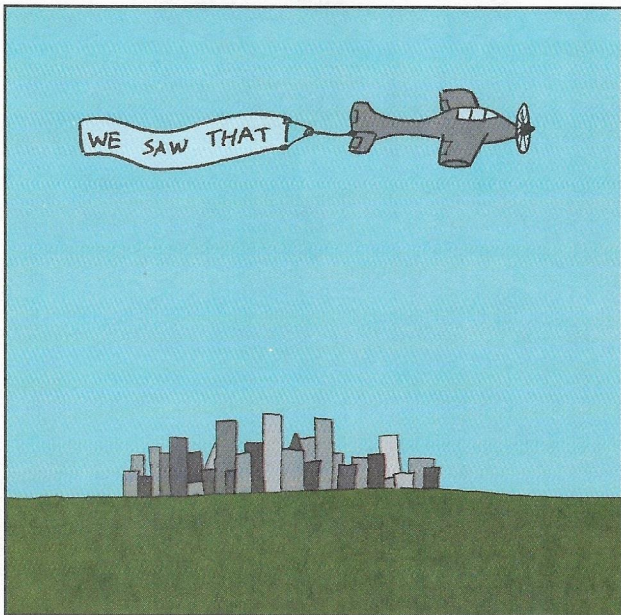

So this is kind of stupid.

GUESS IF I'M TIRED

I'll give you an easy one. I just pulled three all-nighters.

I've been awake since midnight, but you have to ask yourself: What time is it?

I slept nine hours last night, but you also have to look at my face.

Okay. I've been up since noon yesterday, but today I took a nap from noon to seven. And it was a good nap. A pretty good nap.

Oh my God I'm so tired. No, really. Do I look tired?

Who's got time to be tired?

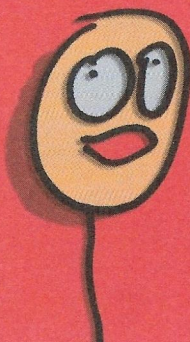

My mommy makes me go to bed at seven, but I'm also an insomniac!

This should stump you. I took ten twelve-hour naps in the last three weeks, but you don't know when I took them.

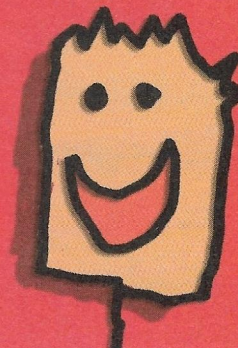

Sure, I'm tired. Psyche! No, seriously, I'm really tired.

I just pulled three all-nighters. Wait, did someone already say that? But I did pull three all-nighters.

Try to figure out if I'm too tired to drive.

I'm tired?

BROOKLYN RACE WARI!

BROOKLYN RACE WARI!

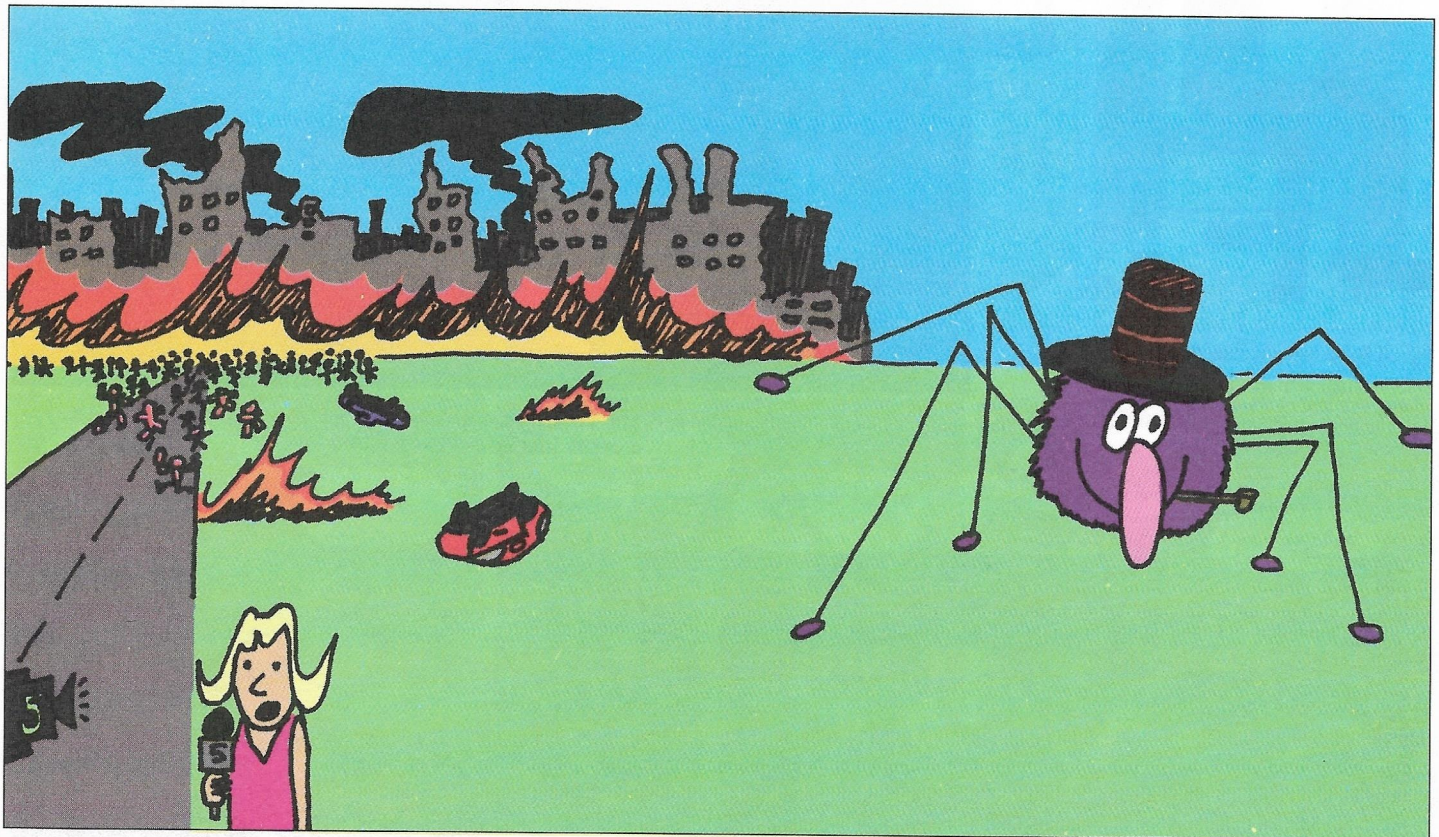

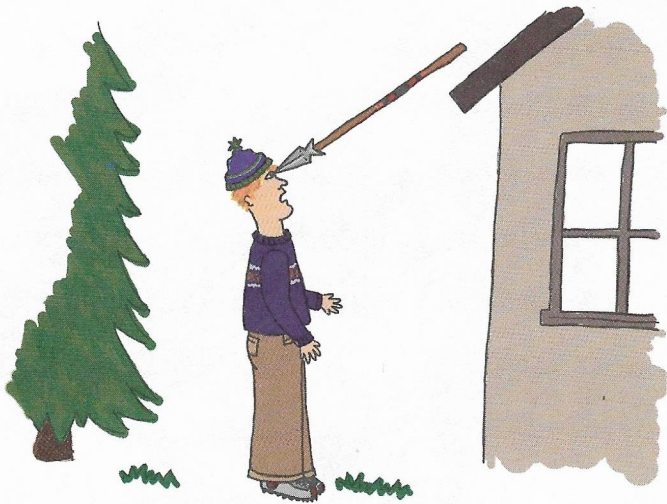

“It would be good to be involved with some stupid Internet startup.”

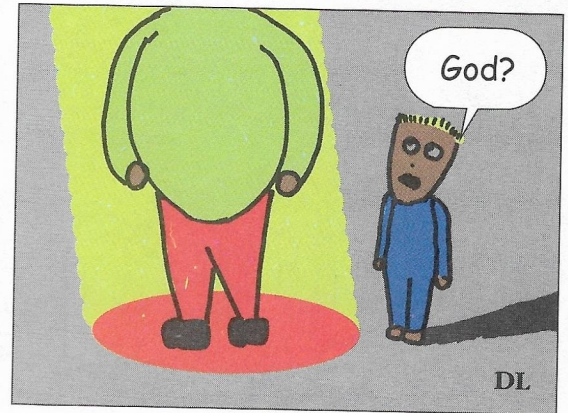

Doug didn't have a family or friends, but he was wealthy in a way most people will never be—he was rich in money.

“The fact that a cartoon spider destroyed the city only made it that much worse.”

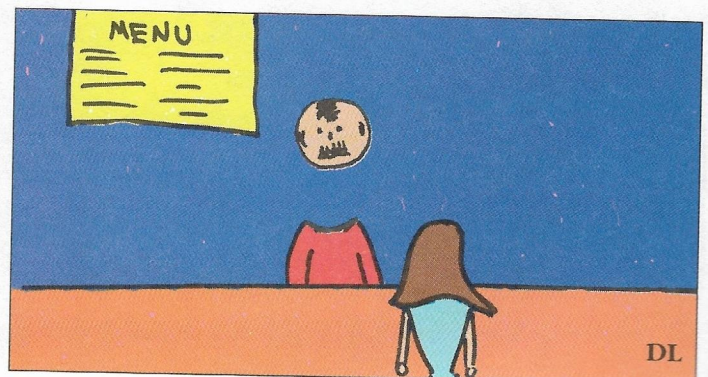

"Shit," said Tom, as the spear sank into his eye.

Once again, Jason was glad for his bottom.

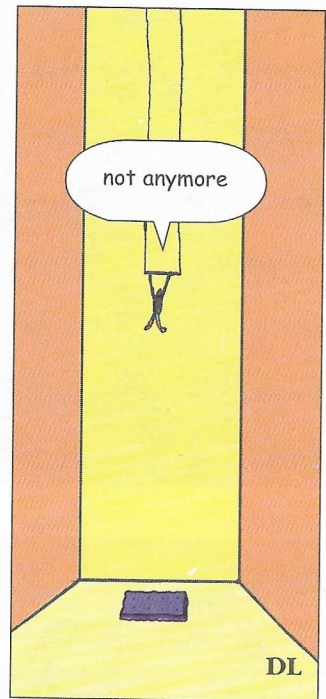

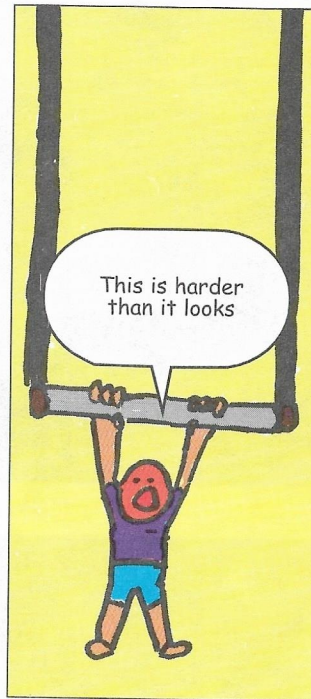

Sure, the caped plumber was scary, but he was just so fucking good.

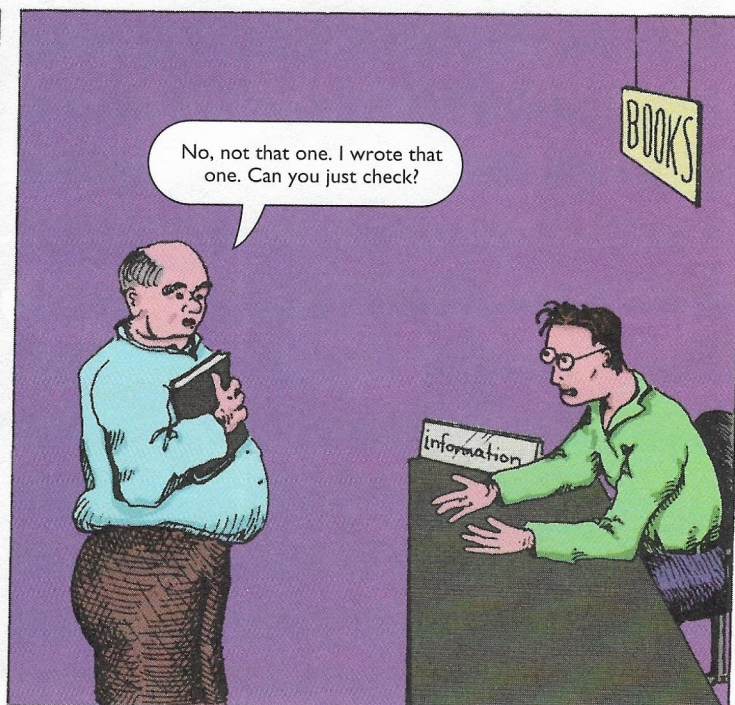

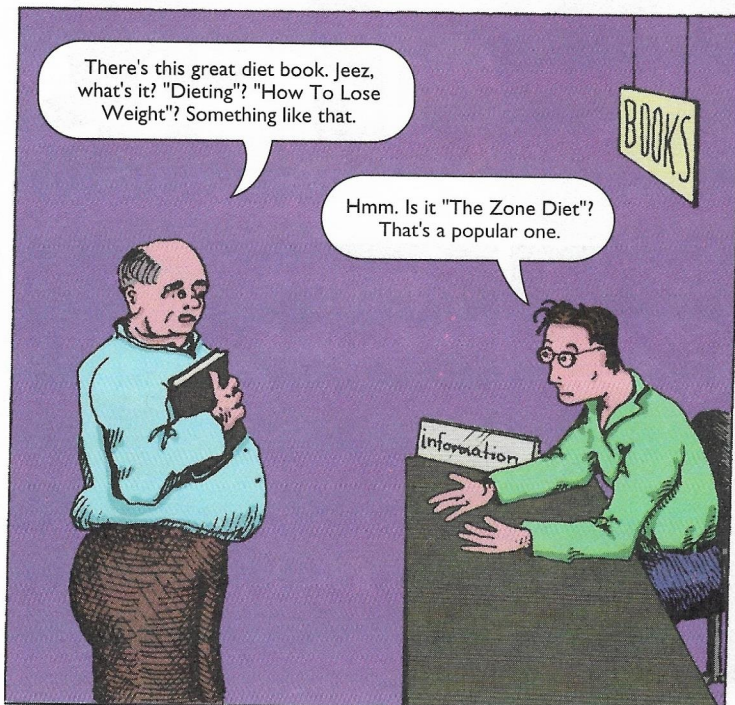

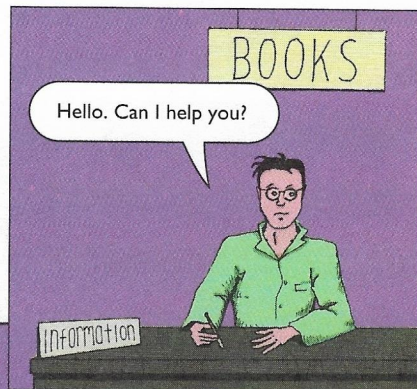

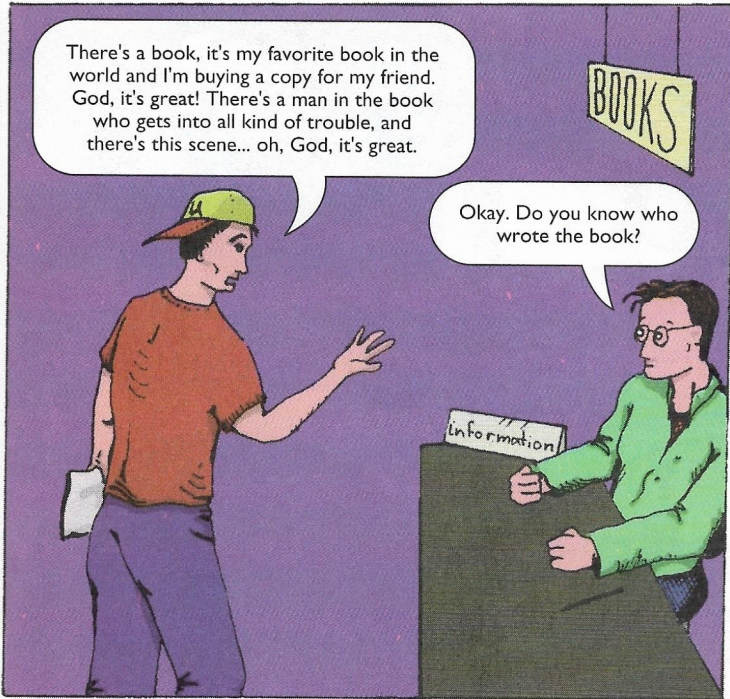

God wanted Jonathan almost as much as the people did.
